Grass Seeds

There is absolutely nothing more important to the Tazewell farmer as the selection of grass seeds. Fully one-third of the meadows in Tazewell today are weeds. You can't afford this; there is a remedy—buy nothing but choice seeds, and when you buy our "Star" brands you are getting the best that grow. Don't be satisfied with the best your merchant has, but the best that can be had. Good seeds, like all good things, come high, but what is 25c to 30c on the price of seeds when it gives you something pure and clean.

Write us at once for prices and samples and let us know what you want. Don't forget that we are selling direct to the farmer at wholesale prices. We want your patronage and will promise you the best that grows out of the earth in return.

U. S. Marshall Dailey says the report in the Daily Telegraph on Tuesday morning about his having gone to arrest several female moonshiners in the west end of this county was pure fiction, produced in the minds of some of his Bluefield friends by Bluefield's famous "bug juice."

Major John D. Dailey, the U. S. Marshall, remarked on the street the other day, in reference to the high tax placed on the automobile that all this "rumpus" about the automobile and street car would not last long, as in a few years the automobile and street car would go into partnership and combine against the flying machine. There may be more truth than poetry in this.

Real Music.

(From our Burke's Garden Correspondent.)

You may talk about Beethoven, of Mozart and Rubenstein, For their music may be bully—but another kind for mine.

You may talk about sonatas with their low and swelling chords, Or about those fairy nothings that are called "songs without words." And your rhapsodies and fugues, with their trills and roundelays May be counted as artisties and entitled to your praise.

But the music that best suits me with its swelling cadence sweet Is the clatter of the binder in the fields of waving wheat.

Mendelssohn was some musician, and of course you ought to know Paganini was the master of the fiddle and the bow.

Paderewski is a wonder when he paws his yellow hair And gets busy with the iv'ry, thumping on the keys for fair.

And there's Sousa with his brasses playing marches full of swing Till you feel your feet a tapping while the very echoes ring.

But the music that will hold me, make my happiness complete, Is the clatter of the binder in the fields of waving wheat.

You can hear the song of plenty rise above the rolling plain As the busy binder clatters through the fields of golden grain.

You can hear the happy laughter that about the land is spread When the music of the binder means a busy world well fed.

For across the hills and valleys sound the chorus of content, Till the world joins in the singing of the people's betterment.

And the summer air is freighted with the harvest music sweet As the busy binder clatters through the fields of waving wheat.—The Commoner, July 23,

Israel Nelson, one of the oldest citizens in the county, died, at his home at Bear Wallow last week.

"Hello! where did you get those new clothes? They look nice, and fit you, too!" "Yes, these clothes are alright," he said, "but they are not new at all, but an old suit that Angrist, the tailor, has just cleaned and pressed He makes them look like new, every time"

We consider this one of the most important departments, the training and educating of children in the great cause of temperance.

We often hear a man say, if I want to drink it is no business of the public. At first that sounds reasonable. It would seem that a man has a right to spend his own money and abuse his own stomach if he wants to do so, but when you look around at the mental, financial and physical wrecks caused by whiskey, wrecks which the public must care for and support, then it looks different. Honor bright, now, don't you believe the public has some right to say how a man shall spend his own money, if in spending it he is likely to bring himself and family to want?
